At City Council meeting

Cemetery tax payment rekindles old problem

By PHIL LEWIS

Record-Herald City Editor

A variety of items were discussed at Wednesday night's Washington C.H. City Council meeting ranging from the old to the new.

One item dating back to December caused a mildly heated discussion between City Council members. It concerned funds for the Washington Cemetery.

The first information item on City Manager George Shapter's bi-monthly report to City Council concerned a $5,847.51 tax payment to the cemetery board of trustees. Evidently the payment came from the Fayette County auditor's office which handles tax funds.

This information item, which was presented by City Council chairman Mrs. Bertha McCullough in the absence of the vacationing Shapter, came as a surprise to some Council members.

Council member John Morris pointed out that Council had never approved any appropriations for the Washington Cemetery fund when the 1977 budget ordinance was approved last December. He was wondering how such a payment could be made without Council's authority.

Remembering back to December, Council members became embroiled in how much money the cemetery fund should receive.

City voters had approved a three-tenths mill levy for operation of the cemetery nearly a year ago. That millage would generate $12,323 for the cemetery's operation. However, Council had voted to allocate $3,000 from the 1976 general fund to aid the cemetery until the millage could be levied.

Shapter's budget proposed that the $3,000 be paid back to the general fund out of the $12,323 earmarked for the cemetery in 1977. Some Council members agreed with the proposal, notably Morris, and some disagreed, notably Joseph O'Brien, who is also a member of the cemetery's board of trustees.

A heated argument ensued last December on whether to pay back the $3,000 or to give the cemetery its full $12,323. The disagreement threatened the passage of the entire $2-million budget for 1977.

As a compromise, Council deleted any mention of the cemetery fund from the appropriation ordinance and passed it. The question of cemetery money was to be brought up at a future Council meeting. However, it has not been mentioned in open Council sessions since December.

The tax payment of over $5,000 to the cemetery fund by the county auditor rekindled the problem.

Mrs. McCullough said she was not sure how the money was given to the cemetery fund without Council's approval of an appropriation. She told Council members she would find out.

Mrs. McCullough also stated that Council has been negligent in avoiding a discussion on how much money the cemetery would receive in 1977.

"We have been lax, trying to avoid a discussion like we had tonight," she said.

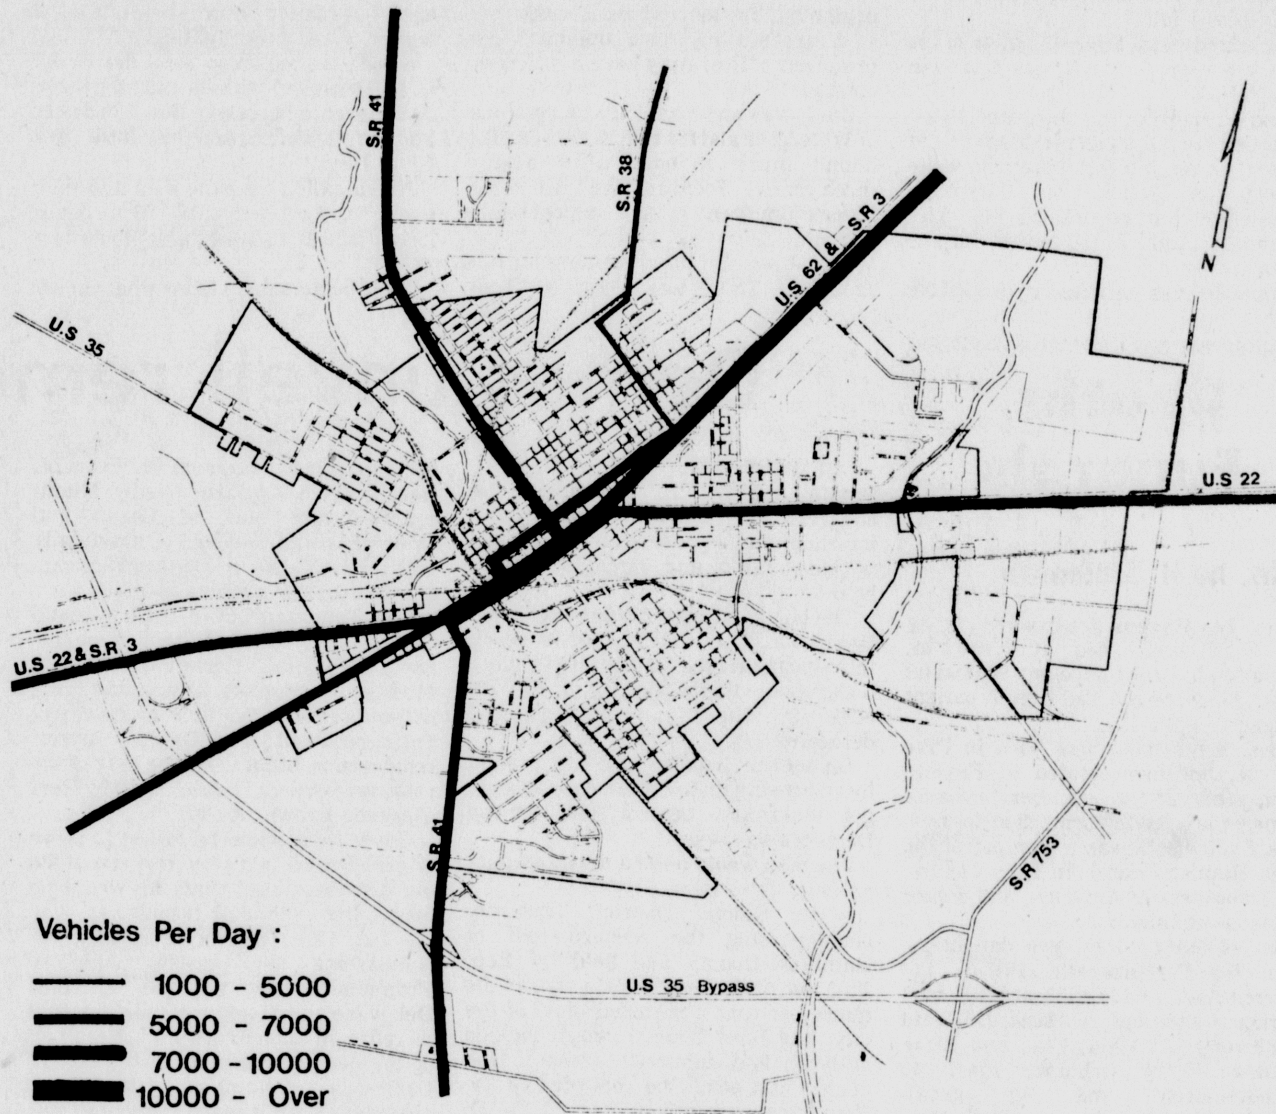

Another matter brought up was the request to approve the City Planning Commission's approval for the rezoning of three lots near the intersection of John and Elm streets.

The planning commission had approved the rezoning of the lots from residential to multi-family in April at the request of Donald Hawk. He plans to build three and two-family housing units on the land.

The proposal was submitted to City Council in April for its approval, but some Council members were concerned that residents' cars would be exiting onto Elm Street once the housing units were built.

They asked that the plans be revised to show how traffic would enter and leave the area. Council hoped the revised plan would not have vehicles exiting on Elm Street, but exiting on John Street.

Attorney Omar Schwart, who is representing Hawk, disclosed the revised plans to Council and after some discussion a motion was passed approving the planning commission's

HEAVY TRAFFIC — The Godwin-Bohm Group, a Columbus-based city planning firm, has outlined the concentration of traffic on Washington C.H.'s streets. The traffic volume study was instrumental in suggestions made by the firm to reduce traffic problems. The most heavily traveled street in the city is Court Street which accommodates over 13,000 vehicles a day.

Fourth in a series

City traffic flow studied

Record-Herald City Editor

Washington C.H. has a unique transportation network. The city is literally the crossroads of south central Ohio.

Three federal highways and four state routes converge on the center of the city creating a wagon-wheel effect and many traffic problems.

The Godwin-Bohm Group, a city planning firm headquartered in Columbus is in the process of updating the city's 1962 master plan, has proposed several ways to ease these traffic problems.

The city planners feel that Washington C.H. needs to develop an outerbelt road system completely surrounding the city to serve traffic that is "just passing through." This would relieve the in-town streets from the traffic they were not designed to handle, the city planning firm contends.

The creation of the U.S. 35 bypass to the south and west of the city has helped ease some traffic problems in the downtown area in recent years.

Another aid would be to create an outerbelt bypass on the east side of the city.

The city planners feel the extension of Ohio 753 should be the first step in developing such a system. They propose that Ohio 753 (Stuckey Road) be looped around the city and connected with U.S. 62.

If such a plan does ease the traffic problems presented by hundreds of through vehicles, local traffic still has only one way to get across the city — Court Street.

To develop more crosstown connector streets, the city planning firm suggests:

—Rawlings Street be extended to tie in with U.S. 62 and aligned with Glenn Avenue. This would be done by looping the street behind the Fayette County Memorial Hospital;

—Waverly Avenue and High Street should be connected to Ohio 41-S. The final location of such a connection would be determined as residential development in the area takes place;

—Warren Avenue should be extended to connect with Damon Drive on the south side of the city;

—Glenn Avenue should be looped back around and connected with U.S. 62 east of the present city limits; and —Damon Drive should be realigned and a traffic signal placed at the Ohio 41-S intersection.

These recommendations still leave out two of the city's main traffic problem areas — the intricate intersection of Clinton and Highland avenues at Court Street and the intersection of Elm Street and U.S. 62-NE. The city planners have special plans for these problems.

The first intersection has three major highways converging into Court Street near the Kroger Co. store.

One way to eliminate the problem would be to block off Leesburg Avenue (U.S. 62) east of Draper Street and channel traffic to the Clinton Avenue and Draper Street intersection. This, the city planners say, would be the quickest and cheapest way to fight that traffic problem.

The Elm Street-U.S. 62 intersection near the Fayette County Memorial Hospital and the Washington Square Shopping Center would need a bit more intricate plan.

First, U.S. 62 would be widened to provide a left turn lane and a street on the southeast side of U.S. 62, would be created for local traffic. For instance the street would run parallel to U.S. 62 between the Murphy Mart store and Wendy's Hamburger restaurant.

Secondly, Elm Street would be widened and its intersection with U.S. 62 would be moved toward the west and form a "T" intersection instead of a "Y" intersection.

The city planning firm arrived at its preliminary transportation improvement plan by studying the city's traffic flow.

It found that the highest intensity of traffic volume takes place along U.S. 62 on both Court and Market streets.

The average daily (24 hours) traffic volume count along Court Street is 13,480 vehicles. Market Street had a traffic count of 5,300 vehicles. This is a result of it being the major connector route to Columbus and also the access route to major destination areas in the city such as shopping centers and the hospital.

Other high traffic flow routes are Fayette Street (old U.S. 35) which

City Council to change income tax filing date

Washington C.H. residents should mark April 15, 1978, on their calendars.

Not only is that the date the infamous deadline for the filing of federal and state income tax statements, but if an ordinance being considered by Washington C.H. City Council members is approved, it will also be the filing deadline for city income tax statements.

This past year, city residents who had to file municipal income tax statements had a two-week reprieve after filing federal and state tax forms. The deadline for the city income tax filing was April 30.

Of course, city residents, who would just as soon take care of all their income tax obligations at one time, should be relieved. And, that is the precise reason the ordinance is being considered by City Council. Taxpayers will only have one date to remember.

The ordinance, as submitted at Wednesday night's City Council meeting, would amend all sections of the city's income tax ordinance to read April 15 instead of April 30.

The ordinance was placed on its first reading at the meeting with little opposition from Council members, and it should become law after it is placed on three readings and passed, sometime next month.

City Council did pass an ordinance Wednesday night which would amend a section of the city income tax code. The amendment was made to simply correct a typographical error in the original ordinance.

During the study of the city's code, it was discovered that nine words were omitted from a sentence in Section 15 of the income tax ordinance passed last year.

Wednesday's passage of the ordinance will allow the rewriting of the 1976 ordinance and make it read properly.

One other item of legislation was considered at Wednesday's meeting. Council approved a resolution confirming City Manager George H. Shapter's appointment of Edward Sexton to the city Board of Zoning Appeals. Sexton's term on the board will expire June 1, 1980.

Shapter, who is on vacation until next week, was not present at Wednesday's meeting. The announcement of Sexton's appointment was made by City Council chairman Mrs. Bertha McCullough.

Because of U.S. 62-N bridge closing

B'burg to receive additional traffic

The village of Bloomingburg will have to accommodate some additional traffic starting next week when the Ohio Department of Transportation closes a section of U.S. 62-NE to repair a bridge.

On Tuesday morning, a bridge over the north fork of Paint Creek, approximately two miles east of Washington C.H., will be blocked off and traffic will be rerouted through Bloomingburg.

The detour will send Washington C.H.-bound (southbound) traffic west on Ohio 238 to Bloomingburg and then back to U.S. 62 via Ohio 38.

The repair work was authorized because an open joint in the middle of the bridge had become hazardous to motorcycle drivers.

The existing bridge is actually two bridges joined in the middle according to project engineer James Stradeja.

He said the joint and four feet of the bridge will be removed and solid concrete will be poured to produce a solid deck bridge. This will eliminate a six-inch gap in the pavement, which is hazardous to motorcycles.

State highway department crews are expected to close the bridge to traffic at 7 a.m. Tuesday. It will be reopened to one lane the following Tuesday.

Stradeja said the bridge may be closed for only five days, if weather conditions don't hamper work crews.

The bridge was closed to one lane traffic Wednesday as work crews complete preliminary work on the structure. One-lane traffic is expected to continue after the one-week closing until the entire project is completed on June 30.

That work includes the resurfacing and waterproofing of the bridge's pavement and some minor structural repairs underneath the bridge.

The cost of the project, which is totally funded by the state, is estimated at $23,000.

BRIDGE CLOSING SET — This bridge on U.S. 62-NE, two miles north of Washington C.H., will be closed for seven days beginning Tuesday while repairs are completed. The bridge is presently open to one lane traffic.

Meter control officers to begin marking tires

It's time to go change parking spaces.

Washington C.H. City Council has announced that the city's parking meter control officers will begin marking car tires to prohibit overtime parking.

All of the city's parking meters restrict the length of time a vehicle can be parked in one space. Officers will begin placing chalk marks on vehicle tires to determine how long a vehicle has been parked at one parking meter.

Council made the motion to initiate marking tires to eliminate overtime parking at meters during Wednesday's session. City Manager George Shapter recommended the enforcement.

Although Shapter was not at the meeting, he made his recommendation in a written city manager's report.

"I recall the last time we started marking tires, there immediately appeared a reaction as though we were doing something wrong," Shapter's report read.

The report also pointed out that marking tires is allowed by the city's parking enforcement ordinance.

Since the city hasn't been enforcing the overtime parking ordinance, officers will not begin marking tires until the news media informs the public on Council's decision.

"It (enforcing the ordinance) is something we should have been doing, because there are people who park their cars all day and just feed the meter," Council Chairman Bertha McCullough said. "It is against our ordinance."

All but one Council member voted to begin marking tires. The lone negative vote was cast by Billie Wilson.

Will never forgive newsmen for attacks

Nixon ends talks; still claims innocence

WASHINGTON (AP) — Except for an encore to be culled from the cutting room floor sometime this fall, Richard Nixon's answers to the Six Hundred Thousand Dollar Questions are finally on the record.

In his fourth television interview Wednesday night, Nixon talked about how he felt after resigning — "No one in the world, no one in our history could know how I felt."

He talked about the resignation of his vice president — "It was a no-win proposition."

And he spoke of the news media that recorded the fall of his presidency — "I respect some, but for those who write history as fiction, on third-hand knowledge, I have nothing but utter contempt. And, I will never forgive them, never."

While he was enriched by a $600,000 fee for the interview series, and a share of the profits that probably will increase his share to more than $1 million, the nation's knowledge of his role as the "unindicted co-conspirator" of the Watergate scandal reached new heights.

The real value to the four 90-minute programs probably must be determined, as Nixon suggested from the beginning, by the individual viewers. "I'll express my own opinion," he promised. "They may have a different opinion."

But it was apparent Nixon's opinions of Watergate and his role in the scandal hadn't much changed after nearly three years — Richard Nixon still holds himself innocent of any impeachable offense.

The shows did have their emotional moments. There was Nixon on Wednesday night, saying he would have preferred "the agony of a trial" to accepting a pardon that connoted guilt; that his resignation meant "life without purpose as far as I was concerned."

"No one in the world, and no one in our history could know how I felt.... Is that punishment enough? No, probably not," he said.

But "We have to live with not only the past, but for the future... whatever it brings, I'll still be fighting."

Strong feelings also were drawn out in a discussion, without naming them, of Watergate reporters Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein and their book "The Final Days."

Nixon called both the men and their book "trash," and said "Mrs. Nixon read it and her stroke came three days later."

"The doctors don't know what caused the stroke," he hastened to add, but "it (the book) sure didn't help."

In the book, the authors said the Nixons had not had sexual relations for 14 years and that Mrs. Nixon sought liquor from the servants quarters in the final days in the White House.

"I certainly hope that we did not cause her stroke," Woodward said Wednesday after hearing Nixon's remarks. "I doubt very much that we did, from what I know about medicine."

Woodward noted that despite Nixon's bitterness, the former president himself confirmed some of the major incidents related in the book, including a scene in which Nixon cried and prayed with his secretary of state, Henry A. Kissinger.

Nixon said he later phoned Kissinger to suggest: "Why don't we just keep that incident to ourselves."

Wednesday's show also had Nixon saying he knew Spiro Agnew would never survive the investigation into his financial dealings, yet his vice president was "an honest man... a courageous man" who was persecuted because he was a conservative.

Nixon said he tried to block the election of Salvador Allende as president of Chile because he feared a Communist revolution would sweep Latin America.

And Nixon said he never considered pardoning himself, that he was afraid pardoning his top aides would look like "the ultimate coverup" and that he never discussed his own pardon with Gerald R. Ford, who replaced him in the White House.

Over-all, the television series seemed — as did the famed White House tapes — to bring out something of the inner Nixon.

He was a chameleon, strong and smooth and confident on world affairs; yet halting, uncomfortable, alternately contrite, then bitter; apologetic, then defensive about the issues that brought him down.

He admitted to poor judgment on "the little things," yet insisted he committed no legal wrongdoing. He admitted to lying, but not to covering up. And he spoke of his "paranoia for peace" as justification for acts beyond the normal letter of the law.

Already the teasers are out on the fifth program, to be aired several months away, purportedly based on the mysterious 18½-minute gap in a crucial White House tape and the question of why Nixon didn't simply destroy the evidence that eventually toppled him.

Demos unveil remap plan

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Majority Senate Democrats unveiled a congressional redistricting plan today by which they hope to gain three seats in Washington and strengthen their hold on a fourth.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Marigene Valiquette, D-11 Toledo, was to be introduced into the Senate later today.

Currently Republicans hold a 13-10 edge in the Ohio congressional delegation.

Democrats hope to turn this around by redrawing district boundary lines to get maximum benefit from strong Democratic areas.

The plan would have a major impact on four districts:

—The Second District, presently encompassing the western half of Hamilton County and held by Rep. Thomas A. Luken, D-Ohio, would be altered so that it included most of the city. The First District, would include outlying and suburban areas in the county and would be conceded to the Republican incumbent Rep. Willis D. Gradison Jr., R-Ohio.

—The Fourth District, currently encompassing Hancock, Wyandot, Hardin, Allen, Auglaize, Shelby, Miami counties and part of Logan and Crawford counties would be drastically reshaped to give a Democratic candidate a better advantage.

Rep. Tennyson Guyer, R-Ohio, would find his district pared down to include parts of Miami, Clarke, Greene and Montgomery counties. That would bring in Democratic strength from the city of Springfield and part of Dayton. Guyer's residence in Lima would be part of the redrawn Seventh District, held by Rep. Clarence Brown, R-Ohio.

Guyer then would be forced to move or face Brown in a primary, run in his old district even though he would no longer live within its boundaries.

—The 12th District, currently encompassing the eastern half of Franklin County and all of rural Delaware and Morrow counties, would be redrawn to include the southern half of the county and most of the city of Columbus. Columbus City Councilwoman Fran Ryan, a Democrat, has narrowly lost two consecutive elections to the incumbent Rep. Samuel L.

Devine, R-Ohio, who benefited from votes in the two rural northern counties.

The 15th District, now held by Rep. Chalmers Wylie, R-Ohio, would include the western half of Franklin County, Madison, Union and Delaware counties, a concession to Republicans.

—The 11th District, which includes Ashtabula, most of Lake, Geauga and Portage counties, and part of Trumbull counties, is the final Democratic target.

Rep. J. William Stanton, R-Ohio, would see his district trimmed down to include a smaller portion of Lake, about half of Geauga, a tiny portion of Portage, all of Ashtabula, and all of heavily industrial Trumbull County.

The northwestern and southeastern parts of the state would be largely unaffected by the redistricting plan. Majority Democrats approved a similar remap bill more than two years ago during the "Six Day War."

However, the plan and five other partisan bills were overturned by the Ohio Supreme Court because they were not signed by then-Lt. Gov. John W. Brown, a Republican.

Obscenity, bingo bills OKd

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Bills on such diverse subjects as child pornography, bingo, women heads of households and welfare have advanced in Ohio's legislature.

The Senate voted without dissent Wednesday to impose heavy penalties on the pandering of obscenity that involves minors—up to five years and a $25,000 fine for a first offense, 10 years and $50,000 for subsequent offenses.

Across the Statehouse, representatives approved 81-15 a long-debated bill that makes some changes in Ohio's charitable bingo law—among them the inclusion of Italian-American and other ethnic veterans' organizations as groups which can sponsor games.

Rep. Virginia Aveni, D-17 Lynhurst, won 74-14 approval of her measures creating a pilot project at Cuyahoga Community College, Cleveland, for displaced homemakers who suddenly find themselves, at 35 or over, without spouse or income.

Patterned after a similar program in Oakland, Calif., the project would offer counseling, job placement, job training and other services to displaced homemakers defined in the bill as those 35 or over "not gainfully employed and have had, or would be likely to have difficulty in securing employment."

The House already has approved a $200,000 appropriation to finance the program, which will come under legislative review again in 1980.

Mrs. Aveni's bill and the bingo measure now go to the Senate, along with another House proposal, approved 92-4 Wednesday, which demands better performance of the welfare department in the administration of federal Title XX programs in Ohio.

Under the federal legislation, Ohio is eligible for matching funds for welfare recipient social services, but for various reasons has been unable to establish a full range of qualifying programs.

Freshman Rep. John A. Begala, D-62 Kent, and others came up with the bill which seeks to correct the situation in several ways. In one area, Begala said the department has ignored federally required efforts at the county level to hear citizen recommendations for social services needs. The bill mandates the department to both consider and respond to recommendations coming from local hearings.

Further, the freshman lawmaker said the bill provides that the legislature review not only the annual recommendations of the department, but also the public recommendations and comments which have been made available to the department.

Welfare department handling of the program, mostly "letting the counties run it"—said Begala—came under criticism from both political parties.

Begala called it "a disgrace," while Rep. Richard F. Maier, R-48 Massillon, who served on the subcommittee which drafted the legislation, called it "a case of entrenched bureaucratic bungling."

Maier said while he does not support spending federal or other tax funds just because they are available, "it has been demonstrated to everyone that the human needs are there."

Moluccan terrorists release one hostage

ASSEN, The Netherlands (AP) — South Moluccan terrorists holding 105 children in a nearby village school today released their first hostage since the initial takeover, a small girl who complained of feeling ill.

The girl, 7 or 8 years old, was wrapped in a blanket and taken away in an ambulance shortly after noon.

A second group of gunmen today pushed a bound and blindfolded man, dressed in symbolic white to signify execution, from a hijacked train where they are holding 55 hostages, Dutch officials said.

The hostage stood on the tracks for about 20 minutes with a rope around his neck and his hands tied before being yanked back into the train, a spokesman for the Dutch Justice Ministry said.

In the Moluccans' native East Indies, prisoners about to be killed are dressed in white, the official explained.

The four yellow cars of the hijacked intercity train were sitting in open pastureland just north of this northern Dutch city. The school, where the terrorists also held six teachers, is in Bovensmilde, just south of here.

The terrorists, who staged the twin takeovers Monday, refused food at both locations Wednesday.

A justice ministry spokesman said the terrorists at the train, believed to number seven, apparently were trying to impress authorities that they were serious. He said he did not think they were about to kill anyone.

The militants, who are seeking independence from Indonesia for their native islands in the Pacific, forced three hostages onto the tracks Wednesday night after allowing a deadline for meeting their demands to pass without incident earlier in the day.

Authorities said the group on the train was trying to demonstrate "complete power" over their hostages, who began their second full day without fresh food and drink. The terrorists have accepted no food since Tuesday and refused a delivery again this morning.

The sun continued to beat down on the black steel train roof today as it has since Monday. The temperature rose to 85 degrees Wednesday outside the train. One official described the conditions inside as "appalling."

One of the hostages on the train is the father of two children being held at the school. His wife is pregnant and was sequestered by police in the farming village of Bovensmilde. The couple was not identified.

There was a some suspense on Wall Street as the Dow hovered just above 900—a level which analysts described as psychologically important.

Today's early prices included Citicorp, off ¼ at 26; Dow Chemical, unchanged at 35, and Texaco, up ½ at 26¼.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average closed with a 9.16 loss at a new 16-month low of 903.24.

For the past week the average showed a 38.69-point loss, extending its decline since the start of the year to more than 101 points.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about a 5-2 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume came to 20.71 million shares, against 20.05 million on Tuesday.

The NYSE's composite index fell .49 to 52.95.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .57 at 112.66.

recommendation to rezone the property.

Some of the new items discussed by Council concerned:

NEW CITY BUILDING

Mrs. McCullough reported that the sale contract for the purchase of the Kirk Auto Part's building at 215 E. Market St. has been prepared. Council passed a motion authorizing Shapter to sign the agreement.

Council approved the purchase of the building earlier this month for $50,000.

The city can begin moving its offices into the building on or before Sept. 1. The building is expected to become vacant in mid-June.

NEW PICKUP TRUCK

Council accepted the low bid of $4,399 for the purchase of a three-quarter ton pickup truck. The low bid was submitted by Ron Farmer's Auto Supermarket. A slightly higher bid was submitted by Carroll-Halliday Inc.

PAINTSTRIPER

Bid specifications have been completed and advertised for the purchase of a double-line paint stripper to be used on city streets. Council approved the advertisement of bids on the machine which will paint center lines on streets at the last regular meeting.

HORSESHOE COURTS

At the previous Council meeting, Shapter was directed to proceed with the installation of several horseshoe courts at Eymann Park based on an offer from a private citizen to build the courts. Robert Craig of the city recreation board is working on the details of the project.

Enough donors report, but local blood quota remains elusive

Enough donors reported to the Red Cross Bloodmobile Wednesday for Fayette County to meet its quota, but the 170-pint total needed remained elusive.

The Fayette County Chapter of the American Red Cross said today that 175 prospective donors reported to the bloodmobile, but 19 were rejected for various medical reasons. A total of 156 pints (14 pints short of the quota) of blood were received.

The local Red Cross office scheduled 173 persons for appointments. Sixteen of the persons were first-time donors and eight were walk-ins. Thirty-two persons donated blood for replacements.

Morrison Gilbert received a pin as he increased his donations to nine gallons. Pins were also distributed to David L. Baughn and Louis S. Ford, seven gallons; Robert E. Carle and Paul E. Hurt, four gallons; Frank Pope Jr., Fred Doyle, Vivian Smith, Orlyn C. Van Dyne and Joy E. Phillips, two gallons; and Ron Rockhold, Stephen Deere and Deborah Peterson, one gallon.

Physicians on duty were Dr. K.K. Wong, Dr. Robert U. Anderson, Dr. Robert Woodmansee, Dr. Byers Shaw, Dr. K.W. Chan, Dr. Phillip Binzel and Dr. Ralph Gebhart.

Registered nurses were Corrine Sperry, Gretchen Witherspoon, Betty Lundberg, Joan Jacobson, Carol Halliday, Gail Roszmann, Donna Eddy and Margaret Johnson. Licensed practical nurses were Barbara Foy and Vivian Underwood.

Red Cross staff aides on duty were Mrs. Margaret Bloomer, Mrs. Dorothy Miller, Mrs. Marie Mace, Helen Slavens, Nancy Elliott, Rita Lanman, Lois Duff, Teresa Rapp, Rhonda Grubb, Janet Wilson, Frances White, Sue Myers, Nadine Rost, Chris Rosz-mann, Kendra Knecht and Verna Williams.

Marie Mace and Norma Dodd of the Business and Professional Women's Club provided transportation.

Canteen workers were Rosemary Persinger, Libby Brown, Mary J. Calentine, Mary Brocke, Virginia Loudner, Joyce Bower, Cathy Meredith, Agnes Riley, Dorothy Mahoney and Ruth Parrett.

Contribution to the canteen were the Pic-A-Fay 4-H Club, the Midland Grocery Co., Sagar Dairy, the women of the Bloomingburg Presbyterian Church, Pennington Bread, Ev's Foods and Connie Seymour.

Welcome Wagon Club members staffing the nursery were Kay Huber, Suzi McCracken, Betty Shaffer, Claudia Tippet, Sandy White, Dawn Caughron, Beverly Snodgrass and Pat Pfeifer.

In all, 40 volunteers logged a total of 265 hours at the bloodmobile. City employees set up the equipment and cadets from the Washington Senior High School NJROTC brigade reloaded the equipment for the return trip.

'Chocolate tycoons' learn business

MENTOR, Ohio (AP) — Third graders in Dale R. Rice school had a yummy way of learning economics this year—they set up a chocolate factory.

And the earnings from their business also will leave a good taste in their mouths: the $289.19 profit is going to finance a pizza party.

"We were trying to find something the children could do which would be both fun and a learning experience," said Margaret Fletcher, one of three teachers who developed the project. "We wanted then to begin to learn about economics and how the whole system works."

The class picked the chocolate business and decided to sell the candy just before Easter. Then they could spend the rest of the year discussing the project.

"We gave the students some basic ideas, but they took it from there," said Kathleen Bonnes, another teacher who helped on the project. "They got very involved and came up with ideas of their own."

"Quite good ideas, too," she added. A board of directors was picked, including some teachers and parents as well as pupils, and after reviewing job applications the board picked Ken Koleszar as president.

Job selections were tough for some pupils. Eight-year-old David Stentz said his first job choice was chocolate pourer. He picked vice president next.

The candy was manufactured each Thursday morning for three weeks.

"It was fantastic," said teacher Wendy Williams. "On Thursdays we did not have absences or discipline problems. Everybody wanted to be involved."

The pupils were paid for their work in currency called "gumps" printed for the project, with every worker getting five gumps per 30-minute work stint.

The candy was sold for real money, and ingredients were paid for in cash.

It was just like real life, and the class even had a case of counterfeiting to cope with. One pupil took a sheet of gumps home "and ran off lots more on his father's copying machine," said Mrs. Fletcher.

"We discovered it immediately," she added. "The copies were clearer than our originals."

Wants road tolls kept

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Tolls will continue on the Ohio Turnpike even after the highway is paid for, if a Lucas County lawmaker has his way.

Rep. Arthur Wilkowski, D-46 Toledo, introduced legislation Wednesday to continue tolls to provide money for energy research and development, railroads and civilian conservation programs.

Wilkowski sponsored the civilian job camp plan and is an advocate of revitalization of rail service in the state.

The Ohio Turnpike Commission, which is on record as opposing continuation of tolls for any reason, estimates the turnpike's bonded debt will be retired by 1981.

The late chairman of the commission, James W. Shocknessy, adamantly opposed use of toll money for any purpose other than debt retirement and maintenance of the highway.

Opinion And Comment

A warning to business

Business opposition to consumer-interest legislation may be not only shortsighted, but downright foolhardy. This view is based on an opinion survey commissioned by Sentry Insurance, a worldwide insurance group. The survey's results suggest that if business doesn't pay more attention to consumer complaints it may wind up with far more government regulation than is now the case.

The study was made by Louis Harris & Associates and Harvard University specialists. They conducted interviews with many consumers, and with business, government and consumer affairs representatives. Their fundamental conclusion was that business leaders are "alarmingly" out of touch with how consumers feel about their products and services.

A summation by Harris is worth quoting at some length. "The study," he said, "serves as a clear early warning signal to business. If business reacts slowly and grudgingly to consumer demands and fails to live up to consumer expectations, the call for far-reaching changes in the management and regulation of business may become irresistible."

Harris also made this observation, which can only be chilling to businessmen who have responded with hostility to consumer activists: "There is widespread recognition that the regulation of business is not satisfactory and needs reform. And there is a widespread desire to involve people outside the federal government - consumer activists, individual consumers and business itself in the process." Chilling to the diehards, as we say, yet promising in that there is some inclination to involve business in the reform process.

Of the consumers interviewed, 61 per cent said they thought the quality of most products had deteriorated over the past 10 years. Fifty-seven per cent branded warranties as inadequate - and 54 per cent considered them not understandable. Somewhat less than half, but still a sobering 44 per cent, decried "the failure of many companies to live up to" advertising claims.

The handwriting on this wall is not at all hard to read. It says in effect: A majority of Americans find serious faults in the performance of business with regard to meeting consumer needs and wishes. Businessmen, having discerned that message, would do well to take constructive action before consumer unrest forces onerous further controls upon their enterprises.

A WORD EDGEWISE...By John P. Roche

A posse full of hubris

If you have devoted 30 years of your life to the study of history, jurisprudence and political thought, it is very difficult to approach international problems in search of a fast fix. When someone tells you, for example, that our refusal to recognize Peking after 1949 had a fundamental impact on Red Chinese attitudes towards the United States, he is unknowingly engaged in amazing "hubris" - from the Greek for "chutzpah." The roots of Chinese reactions to the West (whether Russia or America) go back thousands of years and are not subject to overnight change.

Admittedly one can overestimate the burden of history to oppose any change whatsoever, but this has hardly been an American characteristic. Sir Denis Brogan, the distinguished historian, told a story of visiting Alsace in 1946 and asking some peasants what the Nazis were like. After some thought, they told him the Nazis were not as bad as the Swedes - who had last been in the area in the 17th century! An American handed a world problem reacts in the opposite mood: he thinks history began the day he got his assignment.

What started me on this train of speculation was the news that Vice President Fritz Mondale, Ambassador Andy Young and the human rights posse are off to settle things in Southern Africa, settle them Right, Once and for all. There is some personal irony involved in Al Lowenstein doing duty as Young's Deputy Sheriff: a decade ago Al was exhorting me for supposedly wanting to play world policeman!

Meanwhile in Moscow, a high Soviet source has blasted the Chinese and passed out a lot of free advice to the United States. The gist of the message? "Remember Munich!" The Chinese, according to this version, are planning aggression against everybody and must be stopped early. To translate this into policy terms, the United States should not be lulled into a de facto alliance with Peking or provide the Chinese with weapons.

In short, our missionary role, which fell into disrepute during the Indochina era, is now back in good standing. Not only should we preside over the liberation of Africa, but also recall the lesson of Munich and grid our loins against the "Yellow Peril." What worries me is that a new crop of national security intellectuals - looking to Woodrow Wilson rather than Metternich - may decide it is our mission to save the world.

I have nothing per se against redeeming the world, but there are two prudential considerations that must be fed into any program. The first is abstract: American intellectuals when they get into policy-making roles think the world, like the universe of ideas, is infinitely manipulable. In this case, recall the Multilateral Nuclear Force, born under Eisenhower, overblown under Kennedy, and buried by Johnson. Stripped of cosmetic decoration, the MLF was designed to satisfy the German desire for nuclear capability while simultaneously convincing everybody else, including the Soviets, that the Germans were getting nothing!

Maybe you can pull that off in a faculty meeting, but in practice the concept was a non-starter. Under Johnson we had a similar dreamboat in Vietnam: a school was set up to train 57-man teams of Vietnamese to go forth and rally the hearts and minds of the people. The program was modelled on Leninist principles, except the cadres were supposed to infuse democratic precepts into the populace.

When I asked two leading missionaries in this cause, Ed Lansdale and Daniel Ellsberg, precisely what ideological virus these cadres were supposed to spread, they fudged a bit, then allowed as how it was New England town meeting stuff. When I suggested Tay Ninh was not Concord, they indicated I had a soul deficiency.

The second prudential reservation is ad hominem: in my experience, most of the political intellectuals, the masterly "crisis-managers," couldn't organize a two-car funeral. Their specialty is charades: they can superbly "sandbox" a hypothetical 100-car funeral. To be specific, I doubt if Andy Young, Al Lowenstein and Brady Tyson could launch majority rule in Monaco.

This may sound like a strange position to take for one who has himself been a "political intellectual," but my liberalism is out of St. Augustine by the late Reinhold Niebuhr with hubris as Original Sin.

Ohio Perspective

Consumer counsel has problems

By TOM DIEMER
Associated Press Writer
COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) - Consumer Counsel William A. Spratley, the new advocate of residential utility customers, fears the relationship between his office and the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio may have to be settled in court.

Spratley, former senior hearing examiner at PUCO, has encountered some problems getting information from the regulatory agency.

"It's an institutional problem in a sense that the commission has never had to deal with a consumer advocate who has a statutory right (to information)," Spratley said. "They're not used to someone sitting there claiming to represent residential interests."

PUCO is supposed to balance the interest of utility companies with those of their rate-paying customers. But until the consumer counsel's office was established by the legislature last year, there was no government entity to specifically represent homeowners and renters.

"I just think access to information is the foundation of the whole thing," Spratley said.

The consumer counsel's "thing" is to intervene in rate cases before PUCO, follow up on consumer complaints and act as a voice for the rate-paying public in the legislative arena.

Spratley, a 30-year-old Democrat, was named Ohio's first consumer counsel last Feb. 23, just after the political balance at PUCO shifted to the Republicans.

But he says his early difficulties with his old employer involve an "administrative problem," unrelated to political considerations.

"The Republican Administration (of Gov. James A. Rhodes) has been quite cooperative," Spratley said at a press briefing.

Spratley, an attorney, said his top priority was participation in utility requests for rate increases and he is currently involved in a $46.9 million application of Dayton Power and Light Co.

The consumer counsel contends that DP&L's rate base for electric service should be reduced by $17.7 million before any increase is granted.

He has also intervened in a Toledo Edison Co. fuel adjustment case to determine the validity of the company's passing-through of higher coal costs to customer's bills.

Dear Abby:

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Wants to kick

older-man habit

DEAR ABBY: I am a 20-year-old college girl with a high I.Q., but I have a big problem concerning men. I relate very well to older men, but college men seem so immature that I can't work up any romantic interest in any of them. Believe me, I've tried.

This year I've had two affairs with older men. I never thought I'd be "that kind of girl." It would really hurt my parents if they knew, so I'm very discreet about it.

These men weren't just men I'd picked up somewhere, but people I'd known a long time.

Abby, I want so much to be held and loved, but I don't want to be on the receiving end only. When a man gives me his love I do everything possible to give him as much as I get.

Right now I'm flirting with a married man who is 47. I'm sure nothing lasting can ever come of it, but I can't seem to help myself.

Lately I've been having recurring suicidal thoughts and that scares the daylight out of me. Please help me. WANTS TO BE LOVED

DEAR WANTS: You're normal. EVERYBODY wants to be loved, but you may have some deep-seated emotional problems that need to be resolved.

If there's a Suicide Prevention Clinic in your town, call them. They offer excellent counseling. Or call your mental health clinic for an appointment. If your college has a counseling service, take advantage of it. Please write again and tell me which of these recommendations you're pursuing, and let me know how you're doing. I care.

DEAR ABBY: Over drinks, my friend of 25 years informed me that the cocktail I was drinking contained more alcohol than the bottle of beer he was drinking.

I told him I thought there was as much alcohol in his bottle of beer as there was in my cocktail. An argument followed, and now we have a bet on. I'm sure I'm right, but I can't prove it. Can you help me?

A BET AT REILLY'S
DEAR BET: One shot of whiskey (one and one-half ounces), a glass of table wine (five ounces) and a pint of beer (16 ounces) all contain approximately the same amount of ethyl alcohol.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are the same age, but he prefers older women. I don't know why he married me. He didn't have to. Soon after we were married, I found out he had been living with a woman in her forties since he was 18. He was then 23. He wanted to keep seeing her, but I put a stop to it. Then he started seeing a neighbor's wife. She was in her early fifties. We had to move away from there before she broke up our marriage.

When our first child was born, I hired an ugly old woman in her sixties to help me. I thought surely my husband could be trusted with her, but I was wrong. He was with her every chance he got.

Everybody tells me I am nice looking. Is there something wrong with me? Or is it him?

DEAR VEGAS: It's him.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20)

A find day for teamwork. Many useful ideas will result from an exchange of views with associates. Some good news indicated in the p.m.

YOU BORN TODAY are extremely versatile, and expect a great deal of yourself - even more than others expect. You are a perfectionist and, because of this, often drive yourself to the point of fatigue and hypertension. Your tastes are primarily of a literary nature, and you could succeed in any branch of this art, but you would also make a successful lawyer, financier, musician or dramatic entertainer.

Majority Democrats pleased with legislative schedule

By ROBERT E. MILLER

Associated Press Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Majority

Democrats obviously are pleased that their legislative program is on schedule and think they can adjourn the 1977 session July 29, for all practical purposes.

House Speaker Vernal G. Riffe Jr., D-89 New Boston said "we may come back for two or three days in September, but by the time August gets here, most of the work should be done."

The speaker obviously is contemplating the possibility of vetoes by GOP Gov. James A. Rhodes after the July 29 date. Nearly always, the legislature approves a big batch of bills in a last minute frenzy known as "horse trading days."

Returning in September would give veto-proof Democratic majorities a chance to act on vetoes, and clean up any other remaining business.

Problems yet uncovered could affect the speaker's timetable, but it appears that the state budget bill, along with some supplemental spending measures in the "must" category, are proceeding as planned.

The major $11.6 billion appropriations bill has been passed by the House and is pending in the Senate where hearings are well along. Also in the Senate are separate measures containing budget bill "intent" language, and the legislative blueprint for distribution of state school subsidies.

Plans call for the Senate to exchange those latter two measures with the House for a pair of other spending bills—a capital improvements outlay totaling about $406 million in new money and a transportation-highway safety bill that runs about $1 billion.

Otherwise, hearings are under way in the Senate on a Democratic priority bill establishing collective bargaining for public employees. It is similar to a measure approved by both chambers in 1975 but vetoed by Rhodes.

Approved by one house and awaiting action in the other are constitutional amendments allowing the legislature to issue capital improvement bonds tied to existing revenues—without requiring a vote of the people—and setting up a program to subsidize housing projects for low and moderate income families.

Riffe hopes a House committee soon will put together an omnibus bill that seeks to deal with Ohio's energy problems. He favors a new department of energy and environment to pull together efforts of several agencies now seeking to deal on a piecemeal basis with problems such as fuel shortages, fuel allocation, and air pollution.

The Seychelles Islands, colonized by France in the 1700s and owned by Great Britain until recently, have a population of 60,000 people, mostly descendants of liberated African slaves, Indians and Chinese.

In today's age of anxiety

Stress: world's top health problem

EDITOR'S NOTE: May is Mental Health Month and the Paint Valley Mental Health and Mental Retardation Board has prepared a series of articles concerning mental health problems. The article below on stress was written by Dr. Gary Evans, a board member and a psychologist at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Chillicothe.

By DR. GARY EVANS

The 20th Century has been called the Age of Anxiety. Although the path to a meaningful and satisfying way of life has probably never been an easy one, it seems to have become increasingly difficult in recent years. Inflation, unemployment, pollution, energy shortages, broken homes, racial prejudice and numerous other disruptive events subject people to a never ending stream of pressures. It seems as if things are going too fast. More scientific and technical advances have been made in the past 50 years than in all previously recorded time; for many people the pace of change is simply too rapid and traditional values and beliefs may no longer seem to provide guidance and security. All this adds up to what many experts feel is the world's number one health problem - stress.

Despite the stress of modern life, most people still manage to muddle through, worrying along and solving their problems after a fashion. But for many people, the stress proves too great. It is startling to note that emotional disturbances incapacitate more people than all other health problems combined. If present trends continue, it is estimated that one person in ten now living in the United States will at some time require professional treatment for such emotional disturbances. This figure says nothing of the many kinds of organic illnesses brought on and aggravated by emotional conflict and tension. Stress plays a major part in causing ulcers, heart attacks, hypertension, migraine headaches and mental illness. Some experts feel that the accumulated effects of stress are demonstrated in the process called aging.

Whatever the cause of stress, the symptoms are often similar—an increase in heartbeat and a change in the breathing rate, which are signs that the body has increased demands placed upon it. Other signs are nervousness, sleeplessness, irritability, inability to concentrate and loss of muscle coordination.

There is a distinction between stress that is harmful to the body—which might be called distress—and more positive stress, which includes pleasant experiences of joy, happiness and fulfillment. A shopping trip, a game of ping-pong or embracing a loved one can all produce stress—pleasant or unpleasant, beneficial or harmful.

The destructive effects of harmful stress are demonstrated in the work of two mental health researchers, Thomas Holmes and Richard Rahe, in their Social Readjustment Rating Scale. This scale provides an objective method for measuring the accumulated stress to which an individual has been exposed over a period of one year. Each of 43 common experiences that may occur in an individual's life are assigned points corresponding with the impact it had been found to have on 5,000 people in the United States and other countries. The highest point on the scale, the death of a spouse, is assigned 100 points. Some other events are rated as follows: divorce - 73 points, fired from a job - 47 points, retirement - 45 points, death of a close friend - 37 points, change in residence - 20 points, vacation - 13 points, minor violation of the law - 11 points. For persons who had been exposed in recent months to stressful events that add up to a score of 300 or above, these investigations found the risk of developing a major illness within the next two years to be very high, approximately 80 per cent. But people don't have to get sick even though they are subjected to great stress.

Don't brood. Often a simple change of pace, or a refocusing of energies and effort is a way of "getting away from it all" by constructive action. It means doing something positive and useful about a stressful situation instead of brooding.

Finally, proceed one step at a time. Just sensibly putting one foot ahead of the other and working your way toward a solution can relieve tension, and get you away from the deadly "trapped" feeling. If you are taking steps - however slowly - toward a solution to your problems, then you are not trapped and can take pride in your ability to handle the situation.

Miss Milstead and Mr. French exchange marriage vows

The Jeffersonville United Methodist Church was the setting recently for the marriage of Miss Susan Annette Milstead, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Milstead of Rt. 1, Jeffersonville, and Donald Lynn French, son of Mr. and Mrs. Duane C. French, 146 Hawthorne Drive, Washington C.H.

Dr. Haskell Moore, minister of the church, performed the double-ring ceremony before the altar graced with two seven-branch candelabra with leatherleaf and white satin bows, and altar vases filled with white gladiola, blue daisies and white carnations. White satin bows and greenery marked the pews. Mrs. Robert L. Bowen, organist, presented a half-hour prelude of music.

Escorted to the altar by her father, the bride wore a gown of bridal satin with a yoke front, high rounded neckline and long, fitted sleeves. The yoke was lace covered and adorned with tiny seed pearls. The skirt was softly gathered in the back and had a gathered ruffle that encircled into a chapel train.

The sleeves and front skirt panel also featured overlays of lace. Her shoulder-length veil of soft illusion nylon was held in place by a headpiece of Chantilly lace with iridescent sequins and seed pearls. She carried a nosegay of white sweetheart roses, blue daisies, white poms and baby's breath with blue ribbon streamers.

Lisa Irwin was the maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Lynn Lewis, sister of the bride, Dixie Wyatt and Pam French, sisters of the groom. They wore identical gowns of powder blue dotted Swiss fashioned with V-neckline, empire waist and softly gathered skirt. They wore headbands of blue daisies and white carnations and carried nosegays of blue and white daisies, feathered carnations and poms tied with blue streamers.

Denise Wyatt, niece of the groom, was the flowergirl. She wore a powder blue knit dress with lace-trimmed yoke, lace sleeves and gathered skirt. Her headband was of blue and white daisies and she carried a basket of blue daisies and white poms.

Danny Alspaugh served as best man. The ushers were John Milstead, brother of the bride, Charles Wyatt, brother-in-law of the groom, and David Thomas, cousin of the groom.

The bride's mother wore a formal length gown in navy and white. Her corsage was of yellow carnations. The groom's mother chose a formal length gown in aqua blue, and her corsage was of pink carnations.

Miss Susan Valentine presided at the guest book. Hostesses for the reception held in the church Fellowship Hall immediately following the ceremony were Ruby Jacobs, Freda Swaney and Doris Diffendal.

The bride's table was lace covered and centered with a three-tiered wedding cake decorated in blue and white and encircled with greenery. Blue and white candles in crystal holders at each end and a crystal punch bowl completed the setting.

The groom's parents were hosts for the rehearsal dinner held at the General Denver Hotel in Wilmington.

The new Mr. and Mrs. French are 1975 graduates of Miami Trace High School. He is employed at Cincinnati Milacron in Wilmington.

At NJROTC awards ceremony

Russell selected as top cadet

TOP CADET — Phillip Russell is shown here receiving the first "Class of '76 Memorial Award" from Robert N. Highfield, president of the Washington C.H. Board of Education. Russell was named as the "NJROTC Cadet of the Year" for 1977.

The Naval Junior Reserve Officers Training Corps (NJROTC) unit at Washington Senior High School held its eighth annual awards day recently and a total of 30 cadets were honored for individual efforts and achievements. Cadet Lt. Commander Phillip J. Russell, who has commanded the cadet company during the current semester at the high school, was named as the NJROTC Cadet of the Year. He was presented with a Navy League Plaque by Peter Frampton, president of the U.S. Navy League chapter in Columbus, the sponsor of the award.

Russell also was honored by the other graduating NJROTC unit members. When the NJROTC cadets of the class of 1976 graduated, they left behind five attractive medals "to be awarded annually to the senior voted by his classmates to have done the most for NJROTC." Robert Highfield, president of the Washington C.H. Board of Education, presented Russell with the "Class of '76 Memorial Medal."

One of the most difficult tasks Commander Harold W. Vail, the Naval Science instructor, and his assistant, Retired Senior Chief Petty Officer Ken Hays, face each year is to single out one cadet from 100 for the Cadet of the Year honor.

"There are so many qualified, and deserving cadets each year, the choice is always tough. To have the graduating NJROTC cadets vote to honor that same cadet has to be one of the most reassuring events of the year for both of us," said Hays.

The top marksman medal, awarded to the cadet firing the highest individual score each year, was awarded to Cadet Tim Dollison. In presenting the award, Maurice A. Pfeifer, principal at Washington Senior High School, noted that six members of this year's NJROTC rifle team scored higher than the top score from 1976, but Dollison's top score of 249 out of a possible 300 earned him the medal. The other rifle team members and their top scores were Phil Russell (242), Brance Johnson (238), Mike Tolle (233), Jim Eakins (231), Vincent De Santo (229), Steve Begin (215), Chris Sheppard (206), Joe Smith (195) and Steve Reeves (164).

Cadet Lt. Jeff Mongold was named as the distinguished first-year cadet. He was presented with the Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR) Medal by Mrs. Willard Bitzer, a regent with the Washington C.H. DAR chapter. The award is presented annually to the cadet chosen for superior academic performance, military appearance, citizenship and leadership potential. The distinguished second-year cadet award was presented to Cadet Chief Petty Officer Alan Ferguson. Edwin M. Nestor, superintendent of the Washington C.H. School District, presented the Reserve Officers Association Medal to Ferguson who had already received a Distinguished Cadet Award from Commander Vail for displaying exemplary appearance, personal conduct, exceptional military bearing and outstanding leadership and citizenship.

Cadet Lt. Brad Tolle was named as the distinguished third-year cadet and was presented with the Military Order of the World Wars Medal by U.S. Lt. Commander Jerry McDonald, representing the U.S. Navy recruiting district in Columbus.

In earning the award, Tolle not only commanded the cadets during the first semester of the present school year, but represented the NJROTC unit, the school and the community during a 35-day Mediterranean cruise last summer aboard U.S. Navy ships.

Commander Vail presented 10 special commendation certificates to cadets "for demonstrated loyalty, reliability, patriotism and exceptional performance of duty." Cadets receiving the certificates were Jeff Mongold, Gay Sterling, Eddie Lunsford, Sonya Wills, Sandra Wills, Keith Hottinger, Rick Roberts, Phil Russell, Brad Tolle and Vincent DeSanto.

Also singled out by Commander Vail were 14 cadets who received certificates of appreciation. The cadets were Mark Wilt, Jeff Lyons, Charles Haines, Brance Johnson, Keith McCoy, Mike Wilson, Jim Anders, Johnny Forsha, Gary Penwell, Joe Smith, Jeff Tubbs, Mark Payne, Patty Dixon and Carol Sollars.

After a final drill routine performed by graduating NJROTC cadets, Commander Vail presented course completion certificates to the cadets having completed all three years of the Naval Science curriculum. He also presented one and two-year completion certificates to other graduating cadets. Eighteen members of the 1977 graduating class received NJROTC completion certificates.

David Alan Ferguson, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Ferguson, 423 Earl Ave., was named by Commander Vail as the cadet commander for the first semester of the 1977-1978 school year.

HAT TRICK — David Alan Ferguson is shown here receiving a "Distinguished Cadet Award" from Commander H.W. Vail. Ferguson was named as the "Distinguished Second-Year Cadet" and cadet company commander for the first semester of the 1977-1978 school year.

The position carries the rank of cadet lieutenant commander and places Ferguson at the top of the NJROTC chain of command.

After accepting the sword from outgoing Company Commander Phillip Russell, Ferguson saluted his predecessor and spoke the traditional, "I relieve you, sir." Ferguson becomes the 11th student at Washington Senior High School to command the NJROTC brigade.

Ferguson's first order in his new command was to prepare the "Pass in Review," the traditional salute by first and second-year cadets to their graduating shipmates. As each marching unit passed the formation of graduating cadets they executed an "eyes right", the highest honor properly rendered by troops in rank.

In capping the impressive awards day ceremonies, the graduating NJROTC cadets then filled the air with tossed hats and a resounding cheer, joining scores of former NJROTC cadets who ended high school ROTC days in the traditional manner.

See bank interest increasing

CLEVELAND (AP) — Area bank officials are predicting that prime interest rates are due for another increase soon.

James W. Wert, a vice president of Society National Bank, says he expects the prime rate to rise to 6 3/4 per cent—a one-quarter of one per cent hike—by the end of the week.

He says Cleveland banks probably will follow the move to higher rates, as they did when Citibank of New York increased its prime rate to 6 1/2 per cent May 13. However, Wert added that "there will be a little more foot-dragging this time around."

The prime rate is that which banks charge their best customers.

Cleveland Trust Co. economist Noel McBride said in this week's issue of the bank's newsletter that the "long-awaited increase" was touched off by a recovery of production after a period of inventory liquidation.

McBride said the need to replenish inventories combined with strong renewal of singlefamily housing starts and a jump in installment credit combined to boost business activity during the first quarter.

Some other bank officials questioned whether Citibank would boost rates again in view of sluggish demand for corporate loans in New York.

McBride said also he foresaw problems in the credit surge, saying that for the last two quarters of 1976 consumer spending increased faster than did disposable income.

The difference was financed by credit and a reduction in savings, he said.

Thompson heads chain

CUYAHOGA FALLS, Oh (AP) — Sam D. Thompson Jr., 47, a former Florida food store chain executive recently developing new business for another group, has been named president of yet a third chain.

Consolidated Foods Corp. of Chicago has named Thompson president of its Cuyahoga Falls-based Lawson Milk Co. subsidiary.

Lawsons operates about 750 Convenience Food Stores in Ohio, Michigan and Pennsylvania.

He succeeds Jack E. Rastetter, who left the post last December, along with a vice president. The parent company said at the time that Lawson's hadn't been expanding sufficiently.

Recently Thompson has directed development of new stores in this area for the 7-Eleven chain.

Earlier he had been president of Happy Stores and of Little General Stores, both convenience food store chains based in Florida.

'Pot' data said false

ZANESVILLE, Ohio (AP) — City schools Supt. Ellsworth S. Statler has denied a report that up to 70 per cent of Zanesville High School students use marijuana.

"I have a hunch half of the kids have tried it," he said. "There is little likelihood of heavy traffic in drugs at school."

"We watch such things and deal quite fully with any suspected pushers."

Dr. Statler reacted to a published report that about 70 per cent of city high school students use marijuana regularly and that up to 90 per cent of the junior and senior high students in Muskingum County have tried marijuana.

He added that short of expensive and strict controls at the school, "it is doubtful we can control drugs misuse as we might like."

He said school officials carefully watch for use of drugs, alcohol and tobacco among students and have instituted school educational programs about such things.

See ruling on Piketon plant soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is expected to announce formally within a few days that the federal government will go ahead with construction of a uranium enrichment plant addition near Piketon, Ohio.

But whether it will be the entire $4.1 billion project or a portion of it was not clear.

The President was quoted as telling a delegation of Tennessee congressmen on Wednesday that he would keep his campaign pledge to locate the plant in southern Ohio.

Members of the delegation told newsmen that Carter agreed to consider their proposal to divide portions of the project between the Ohio site and Oak Ridge, Tenn., which also has been vying for the project.

Such a division, said Rep. Marilyn Lloyd, D-Tenn., would allow the President to keep his pledge to Ohio voters and at the same time avoid undercutting employment in Tennessee.

Preliminary work on a gaseous diffusion add-on facility at the Goodyear Atomic Corp. plant near Piketon already had begun in April when the Carter Administration decided to switch to an electricity saving gas centrifuge technique and considered moving the project to Oak Ridge, where gas centrifuge technology largely was developed.

The proposal to move the project brought a storm of protests from Ohio Sens. John Glenn and Howard Metzenbaum, Ohio congressmen, Gov. James A. Rhodes and other state officials.

Swimming beaches to open May 28

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Swimming beaches at Ohio's 43 state parks with lakes will open Saturday, May 28.

The Department of Natural Resources said swimmers may use the beaches from 11 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. on weekends and holidays and from 11 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Lifeguards will be on duty during swimming hours from the Memorial Day weekend through the Labor Day weekend, officials said.

The parks and recreation division's outdoor swimming pools at Hocking Hills and John Bryan state parks also will be open starting May 28, operating on the same schedule as the beaches.

Local teacher named to term on state coordinator council

Carmen A. Frogale, coordinator of the Occupational Work Experience (OWE) program at Washington Senior High School, has been elected to a three-year term as a representative to the state coordinators council.

Frogale was elected by OWE coordinators in the southwestern Ohio district.

The southwest district covers 19 counties and approximately 200 OWE units. The state coordinators council aids the trade and industry department of the Ohio Department of Vocational Education by providing input and advice on vocational education policies.

Frogale, a teacher for the past 16 years, holds degrees from Rio Grande College and Ohio University, Athens. He has completed graduate work at Eastern Michigan University, Washington State University, the University of Cincinnati and Miami University.

He has served as president of the Washington C.H. City Teachers Association. He is a former treasurer of the Washington C.H. Lions Club and served as administrative board chairman of the Grace United Methodist Church.

Burglary incident reported

The Washington C.H. Police Department is investigating a break-in at the Eyman Park concession stand.

Richard Kemp, 817 Lakeview Ave., reported that someone entered the concession stand late Tuesday night or Wednesday morning through a swing door.

The door was reportedly opened by moving it back and forth until a wire securing the door broke. Exit was made by opening the walk-through door from the inside.

The only thing reported missing in the burglary were 12 packages of potato chips, which were valued at $1.20.

The Fayette County Sheriff's Department is investigating an attempted larceny at the Robinson Road Car Wash.

The owner of the car wash, Nelson McCann, reported that someone pried open a coin box, but he didn't think any money was taken. The incident reportedly occurred sometime after midnight Wednesday.

Turtle race on holiday

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — It may not have all the glamor of the "Indianapolis 500," but the Memorial Day "Memphis 500" will be quieter and there's little thought of any of the participants getting hurt.

Three-time champion "Mr. Gusto," a 425-pound Galapagos tortoise at the Overton Park Zoo will be defending his title against a leopard turtle and possibly entries from the Little Rock and Knoxville zoos in the 500-inch classic. It was begun in 1974 by Dr. Joel Wallach, as a means to boost sagging attendance at the Memphis zoo.

More than 600 visitors watched the race last year as "Mr. Gusto" won in record 2-minute, 40-second time.

The race rules permit handlers to push or pull their entries to keep them in line, but no forward pushes or pulls are permitted.

The winner will get a bowl of lettuce.

Kurfess Comments

By Charles F. Kurfess, Ohio House Minority Leader

Ever since its early years of statehood, Ohio has been committed to providing the opportunity of education beyond high school. From our first state universities, Miami at Oxford and Ohio University at Athens, our system has grown to twelve universities, two independent medical colleges, and more than 50 two-year campuses.

The goal of a college campus within commuting distance of every Ohio citizen has been realized.

Of course, the cost of reaching and keeping that commitment is of constant concern to educators, the Governor, the Legislature, Board of Regents, students, and their families. And it certainly is a concern of the taxpayer as well.

The growth in our number of state-supported campuses has been a relatively recent phenomenon. Only last year a new state university was added, the former municipally-supported University of Cincinnati. Also, within the past three and one-half years, three new medical colleges were established to serve the growing need for primary-care physicians.

Many of our new two-year campuses have emphasized technical education in response to the growing demand for a more vocationally-oriented education than is available at most of our four-year academic institutions.

Ohio's strong independent colleges and universities help provide a broad range of higher education options to Ohioans. The contribution of these independent private institutions should not be overlooked.

The cost of higher education is going up. In 1976 the cost to a student for an academic year of college education ranged from $2,300 to $3,200. This was about $400 less than the national average, and yet Ohio's tuition and fees at public colleges and universities currently are fourth highest in the country. The role of the state in funding this education is very important, since between 50 and 55 per cent of instructional costs is borne by state tax funds. Less than half of Ohio's citizens receive college-level education, so it is important that all citizens recognize the general community benefit from our higher education program.

During the present two-year budget period, state expenditures for higher education were nearly $785 million. The proposed budget for 1977-79, is already approved by the House of Representatives, increases this appropriation to $950 million, $25 million less than recommended by Governor Rhodes. While this appears to be a substantial increase, the point is being made that this level of funding will require increased student fees at most institutions during the next two years.

The unique program of assisting both our institutions of higher education and the student as well is the Ohio Instructional Grant program, which provides financial grants to students who, based on family income, cannot afford the entire fees being charged. This method of assistance is just as helpful to the colleges as direct appropriations and provides funding to students based upon their financial need.

It is unfortunate that this program, due to limited resources, has not reached many students from middle-income families.

There is also a program of state fully-guaranteed loans by which the state guarantees to financial institutions loans made to students for some of the costs incurred getting their college education. It might well be suggested that through these various programs, and federally-funded programs as well, certainly most students who have the ability and the desire can obtain a college education in Ohio today.

The Ohio legislature in 1847 passed an act permitting telegraph companies to erect lines along roads and streets "so long as they did not incommode the public."—AP

4-H Roundup

By JEANNIE ANDERSON
4-H Program Assistant

Did you ever give a talk when half your audience were talking... demonstrate a new recipe when viewers left before samples were given out... or give directions to your 4-H'ers which they completely forgot the very next day?

Then maybe you could use a little help by learning how to use visual aids. Visuals are like posters, charts, any "seeing" help for your talks or demonstrations. They make you a more interesting speaker, because they help visualize for the audience what you're saying.

Experts say we remember 15 per cent of what we hear, 75 per cent of what we see but 90 per cent of what we both see and hear at the same time. So visual aids can make your talk or demonstration more effective... by helping your audience understand your ideas better and remember them longer.

Posters, easel, flannel board and magnetic board are some steps in planning visuals. You will first want to know what your visual will illustrate. This depends on the general or specific subject, the general age group of your audience, and where you will give the presentation.

After you have decided the type of visual you will be using, consider the amount of money you will want to spend, the amount of time to prepare the visual, and the amount of time you have to spend working on the visual.

Use your imagination to include a great variety of colors and materials. When you use posters, sometimes "Be Conservative"... and other times "Go Wild".

There are a wealth of free resources that include things, people and places. Things that you might find in your home or community are: Cardboard, stencils, doll houses and furniture, poster paper or art board, newspaper, magazines, catalogs, paints, fabric scraps, wall paper samples, buttons, nuts and bolts, snaps and many other things. The limits of your own imagination are the only limits in using any of these.

After trying some of these ideas you and your 4-H'ers might find that visual aids can be as much fun to make as they are to use.

For more ideas and resources call the County Extension Office at 335-1150.

Bargain air fares need planning

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Travelers have a wider-than-ever variety of air fares and travel packages to choose from this summer, but figuring out which one is best can be harder than finding your way around a strange city.

Advance planning — and paying — can cut costs considerably. The round-trip air fare between New York and London can range from $259 to $1,312 for example. But there are restrictions attached to most of the bargains, so it pays to know exactly what you want and when you want it.

The biggest boom has come in charter flights, with some industry sources estimating that 30 per cent of all trans-Atlantic travel this year will be on charter flights. Ten years ago, only 5 per cent of the flights were charters.

Lower prices also are available on regularly scheduled flights under excursion plans involving limits on the amount of time you spend at your destination and, in some cases, requiring payment well in advance.

For excursion fares within the United States, you generally have to stay 7-30 days, buy your ticket two weeks in advance and pay extra if you fly on the weekend.

Excursion fares to Europe are usually available for stays of 14-21 days and 22-45 days. With one exception, you do not have to pay in advance. There is no penalty for cancellation; weekends cost extra.

The exception is the "APEX" fare which allows you to stay 22-45 days and is lower than the regular 22-45 day excursion. In exchange for the savings, you must buy your ticket 45 days before departure. There is a penalty for cancellation, although you can take out low-cost insurance for about $15 to protect yourself against this possibility.

Here is a guide to the basics of the charters:

OTC — The letters stand for one-stop tour charters and the flights have been operating since 1975. You must purchase the ticket from a travel agent. The package includes air fare, ground accommodations and some services such as a guided tour. You have to buy your ticket 15 days in advance for flights in North America and 30 days in advance for flights elsewhere. There is a minimum stay of four days, three nights in North America and seven days, six nights, elsewhere. There is no refund if you cancel.

ITC — Inclusive tour charters, which are often described as "vacation packages." They include air fare, ground accommodations and services and stops in three cities at least 50 miles apart. You do not have to buy your ticket in advance, but you must stay at least seven days. If you do pay in advance, you may face a penalty for cancellation; it depends on the tour operator. The ITC fares are higher than the OTC packages because there are fewer restrictions.

ABC — Advance booking charters are the newest type on the market, authorized by the Civil Aeronautics Board late last year. They allow you to purchase air fare only under a charter plan and are ideal if you want to stay with friends or shop around for your own hotel. There is no minimum stay required for ABCs in the United States; if you want to go to Europe, you have to stay seven days. You must buy your ticket 45 days in advance for Europe and 30 days in advance for flights elsewhere. There is no penalty for cancellation if the tour operator can find a substitute passenger to take your place.

TGC — Travel group charters may include transportation only or may be offered as part of a package with land arrangements. There is a minimum stay of 7 or 10 days required, depending on where you are going, and you must buy your ticket 60 days in advance. There is no cancellation penalty.

Another common type of package is the one based on the GIT (group inclusive tour) fare. This is not a charter; you travel on regularly scheduled flights.

Welfare plan offers job benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new welfare system envisioned by President Carter would give recipients as much or more federal money as they get now, but would offer rewards to those who take jobs and supplements to workers at the bottom of the pay scale.

Carter said early this month he wanted to scrap the present welfare system and set up a new one, but he gave few details then of what he would propose.

Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. told reporters Wednesday the administration plan is beginning to take shape, although it remains tentative, incomplete and open to change as it is discussed with governors and congressional leaders.

The plan put forth by Califano would classify poor people as those not expected to work and those who are expected to. The most money would be used to supplement the pay of the working poor who can't earn enough to pull themselves out of poverty.

Those who are not expected to work — the aged, disabled and single parents with young children — would be given one monthly cash payment by the federal government. State and local authorities could supplement that payment.

That group, generally those now receiving Aid to Families with Dependent Children or Supplemental Security Income, would be encouraged to work but would not be penalized for continuing to accept benefits.

A family of four in this category would receive up to $4,200 a year in benefits, which Califano said is at least as much as such families now receive from federal sources in cash and food stamps. The stamps would be abolished.

People who fall in the expected-to-work category but are jobless, and those who have jobs but are still poor, would be eligible for what Califano called earned income supplements.

People in that category would be expected to work — and in some cases required to do so — but would be paid cash supplements to raise their standard of living. Training programs and an estimated 1.4 million jobs would be made available to assure that those expected to work could get jobs either in private industry or in public service programs.

A family of four with at least one member working full time at the minimum wage would receive up to $2,300 in supplemental benefits.

But under the new system, no family on straight cash assistance could make as much money as it would if one member were working. Califano said this would eliminate the situation that now exists in some states where a family can make more money on welfare than if someone is working. And, he said, it would encourage people now on welfare to get jobs.

On the other hand, a family in which one member is expected to work but is unemployed could not make nearly as much as the same family if none of its members were expected to work.

Other incentives built into the tentative plan would make it financially rewarding to take a job in private business rather than a government job. It also would encourage people to try to work their way out of poverty by not cutting off welfare as soon as they had taken a job.

Crash kills Ohio woman

TINLEY PARK, Ill. (AP) — An Ohio woman was killed early today when an auto driven by Chicago Bears' wide receiver Brian Baschnagel struck a bridge abutment on Interstate 80.

The woman has been identified as Jane Terveer, 22, of Columbus.

Police said Baschnagel apparently fell asleep at the wheel of his car, and the vehicle swerved off the road.

Baschnagel, 23, a graduate of Ohio State University, also lives in Columbus. State troopers said he was wandering around the wrecked auto in an apparent daze after the accident.

It took police 45 minutes to free Ms. Terveer from the wreckage.

Hospital officials in this southern Chicago suburb said Baschnagel suffered cuts and bruises as well as an "undetermined" knee injury. An orthopedic specialist was scheduled to examine him.

Baschnagel was a rookie last year and captured the Bears' Brian Piccolo award for courage and determination. In addition to catching passes, Baschnagel was a kick returner and special teams' captain.

At Ohio State, Baschnagel averaged 7.6 yards per carry during his 4-year career. His 56 pass receptions placed him fifth among all-time Buckeye receivers. Baschnagel was a first team Academic All-American at OSU.

TV Viewing

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Abe Vigoda, who as ABC's "Fish" plays the nation's best-known old detective with hemorrhoids, slid into the booth at a Beverly Hills eatery and was promptly spotted by the waitress.
A shy man, he still was visibly pleased. He exchanged a moment's small talk with her. Later, he said no, the wide recognition he's gotten from his work in "Barney Miller" and "Fish" hasn't disrupted his life.
"It's a very nice feeling that people recognize you, particularly when it happens in middle age and you've been at your field for so many years and nobody knew you," said the 56-year-old actor.

"It's a happy feeling ... they represent what's happening to me, which is being able to do the things I've been doing."

The doings include:
—A costarring role in a new Neil Simon movie, "The Cheap Detective."
—A planned trip in mid-June to Australia — his first overseas voyage other than the one to Staten Island — to promote "Fish."

—A possible trip in March to Broadway, to star in a new comedy by Allen Boretz, "The Flying Elephant," cast as a middle-aged lawyer who, he says, "falls in love with a Texas hooker."

Vigoda, who comes from Brooklyn, speaks as slowly and gravely as his Fish character, but without the character's dour, all-is-lost outlook.

And though the tired slouch of Fish seems a subliminal warning by the President's Council on Physical Fitness, Vigoda actually is a firm believer in exercise. He plays handball, jogs and recently took up golf.

Still, he says, ever since his first acting job — at age 6 in a school play — he's usually played old men.

"There's something about my countenance, my demeanor if you wish, that suggests I have the world on my back," he said, almost wistfully.

"It's probably one of the reasons Danny Arnold (executive producer of 'Barney Miller' and 'Fish') hired me. I was jogging the day I came into his office and I was a little tired."

"And he said, 'Geez, this guy looks like Fish to me.' And he gave me the part right then and there. But inside I don't feel that way. Inside, I'm an athlete and feel like a man of 35."

Vigoda, who has acted professionally since 1947, credits the 1972 movie hit, "The Godfather," as the turning point in his career. In the movie, he played Tesso, a gunsel of Mafia persuasion.

It led to a string of generally villainous roles in various cop shows, then "Barney Miller," then his own series.

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Richard Hargis is still holding the bag and the 34,412 pennies.

Hargis, a Dayton hairdresser, attempted to pay his $344.12 Dayton Power & Light Co. utility bill with pennies Monday, but he was turned away at the main office.

"I'm pretty darn angry about it," Hargis said. "Money is money, and where does it say in the United States Constitution that you can't pay your bills with coins?"

He said he wanted to give the utility "a hard time" with the loose pennies because "I am protesting rising costs, and on several occasions they have not billed me correctly."

A DP&L spokesman said the company will not accept more than $10 in loose change because it would take "too many man hours" to count.

Hargis says since he made the effort, he considers his bill paid.

Study bubbles helping students

DANVILLE, Ill. (AP) — Plastic bubbles patterned after inflatable indoor tennis courts have proved so successful as study retreats that all classrooms may have them, Danville educators say.

"Kids love the idea," teacher Debbie Howard, one of three who introduced the method, says of her third graders. "It's like having two different rooms, even two different worlds."

The study bubbles for the third and sixth grades at Roselawn Elementary School are formed by taping together light plastic sheets that are inflated with fans. There is room enough inside for 12 children at a time.

School officials say the bubbles have been such a creative teaching method that they may be added to all classrooms. They said some of the school's 350 pupils who don't now have a chance to use them are demanding their turns.

"A dozen pupils enter the bubble, sit quietly and study without interference from the rest of the room," says Mrs. Howard, 24. "I can keep an eye on them inside the bubble and at the same time be teaching another subject to the rest of the class. Sometimes I'm inside the bubble with them."

"The kids want to get inside so much that we use it as an award for good behavior or outstanding achievement," she said.

"We can project slides of the ocean onto the plastic and also project through a bowl of gold fish. We can make the bubble go back and forth and have sounds of waves. Inside it's like being in the ocean," said Mrs. Howard.

"Projection of various slides opens a whole new dimension of studying. We constantly are planning new things for the bubbles."

There will be a greenhouse inside the bubble, with pupils bringing in plants and flowers.

'Sunset' amendments flourish in Assembly

By TOM DIEMER

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Sunset legislation, a method of limiting the life span of new bureaucratic creations, has been added to several bills already in the relatively young 112th General

Teacher wages bulk of school operating costs

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio's public school teachers are paid an average salary of $12,511 annually, 67 per cent of total personnel costs for the 1976-77 school year, according to the Ohio Public Expenditure Council.

"The major portion of operating costs in Ohio's public school districts can be attributed to salaries and wages paid school personnel," the independent research organization said. Total salary and wage expense for the current school year, excluding fringe benefits, will soar above $1.9 billion, the council said, nearly 18 per cent over payroll costs two years ago.

Salaries for the state's 104,669 classroom teachers in public schools went up 16.6 per cent, as compared to 1974-75.

Teachers in city districts were the highest paid, averaging $13,136, the council said, while those in mostly rural local districts got $11,525.

Sandwiched in between were teachers at exempted village districts who made $11,962 and those at joint vocational districts who received an average $12,309.

Among big city districts, teachers in Akron and Cleveland are the best paid, averaging $15,052 and $14,588,

Assembly. In addition, a comprehensive plan to set up a review committee that would judge the worth of more than 260 boards, bureaus and commissions on staggered six-year schedules, has been approved in the House and awaits respectively. The South-Western district in suburban Columbus and Toledo pay their teachers the lowest on average, $12,034 and $12,950, respectively.

Other big city average teacher salaries: Cincinnati, $14,016; Parma, $13,855; Canton, $13,669; Columbus, $13,432; Dayton, $13,367, and Youngstown, $13,163.

Salaries for administrators took a 9.3 per cent bite out of total payroll costs and employee costs for maintenance and operation of school buildings accounted for a 7.1 per cent share, the council said.

The best paid school officials, including superintendents, are the 727 district superintendents who average $26,561 annually, a 15.5 per cent increase over the 1975-76 school year.

They range from the $30,872 average of the 185 city district superintendents to the $24,572 paid to 367 superintendents in local districts.

Slate moonshine festival Friday

NEW STRAITSVILLE, Ohio (AP) — The Moonshine Festival gets underway Friday as volunteer firemen try to make enough money to replace the firehouse and equipment wiped out by a fire.

The Jan. 30 fire, set accidentally by youths stealing gasoline, left the Perry County village of nearly 1,000 without its own fire protection.

Richard Hoy, a Corning fireman, was killed in the blaze.

If the the four-day festival makes substantial profit, a spokesman said a donation probably would be made to the department.

Senate action.

But a Summit County lawmaker has added a new wrinkle to the sunset concept.

Sen. Kenneth R. Cox, D-28 Barberton, succeeded in setting a six-year expiration date for a proposed law, not an agency, but a major enactment giving the attorney general investigative authority to deal with organized crime.

The effective date of the legislation had already been delayed by an amendment to Jan. 1, 1979 when Cox rose to offer his sunset amendment.

It was approved without debate and with only two negative votes, meaning the law will be automatically repealed after 1984, unless it is specifically reenacted by the legislature.

Afterward Cox said he did not intend to make a habit of adding sunset dates to proposed laws.

"I think it should be used very sparingly," he said when asked about the potential for legislative confusion, if a trend developed resulting in a proliferation of laws with automatic repeal dates.

"You could have abuse, but used to a reasonable degree it could be beneficial," the former Barberton mayor said. "I think this is a bill without police powers and if they are abused it should be repealed."

One of the two dissenting votes was a legislator who sits at Cox's right on the Senate floor, Sen. Robert E. O'Shaughnessy, D-15 Columbus.

O'Shaughnessy thinks the sunset clause in the case of the organized crime bill may have demonstrated "lack of faith in the product."

He agreed that automatic termination dates on standard legislation could set a dangerous precedent.

"It's like saying, we'll give you half of it, if you call it off in six years," O'Shaughnessy said. "If you believe in the bill, vote for it."

Sen. Marigene Valiquette, D-11 Toledo, was voted against the Cox sunset amendment.

Skateboard meet set at Akron

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Promoters say the first annual national skateboard championships next month at Derby Downs—site of the All-American Soap Box Derby—will be an invitational event offering $10,000 in prizes to about 20 competitors.

Don Branker of California, president of the Professional Skateboard

Association of America, said Wednesday the two-day competition on the 950-foot slope will wind up with finals in speed runs and slalom events June 19. The championships will be filmed (CBS) for delayed telecast, he said. He said title competitors are in the 20s but that the age of winners is getting lower all the time.

They just get canned

Baseball managers never die . . .

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

If you're interested in job security, become a janitor or a shoe salesman. Don't become a major league manager.

Big league skippers seem to get pink slips about as often they sign contracts. They all seem to get fired one time or another, except Walter Alston. He left the Dodgers last year after 23 seasons. His neck was still intact.

But the lineup bosses shouldn't really fret because baseball is ecologically concerned. The national pastime believes in recycling its managers.

Of the 26 current managers, 15 of them have signed some other team's lineup cards. Just because a manager wasn't good enough for one club doesn't mean he won't be magic for another.

So if Frank Robinson gets fired by the Cleveland Indians, as the rumor goes, chances are good that some other team will start paying his check. When Robinson became baseball's first black manager in 1975, he expected to become the first one fired.

If Robinson's team wins, he's a good manager. But since the Indians are losing, his credentials are being questioned.

It's that simple.

"My philosophy is that it's not the manager or the coach that makes the players; it's the horses that make the manager," says Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley, who is baseball's leader in managerial firings.

Since Finley brought his A's franchise to the Bay Area in 1968, the cantankerous owner has had seven different managers, including Alvin Dark and Hank Bauer, who both were Finley's managers once before in Kansas City.

Since 1968, the Chicago White Sox have had seven managers and California, San Francisco and Philadelphia each have had six. None of those clubs, however, was a consistent winner like Oakland.

Finley, who is said to pull the strings of his managers, says he runs a finishing school in Oakland. "I sort of polish my managers off for somebody else," he says.

That was never truer than when Finley pulled one of the shrewdest baseball deals of all time, trading his 1976 manager, Chuck Tanner, to Pittsburgh for catcher Manny Sanguillen and $100,000.

"Chuckie boy's a good manager, but no manager is worth $100,000 and a starting catcher. Good managers are a dime a dozen. Starting catchers are harder to find."

One manager Finley didn't fire was Dick Williams, who guided the A's to consecutive World Series in 1972 and 1973. Williams, tired of ownership meddling, quit after the 1973 season. He was picked up by California in the middle of 1974, and the Angels went on a lengthy losing streak.

Last season, Williams was fired by the Angels, a last-placed team in 1974 and 1975. This year, Williams manages the Montreal Expos, who just snapped an 11-game losing streak and are near the bottom of the National League East standings.

Ostensibly, Williams is just as good a manager now as he was with the A's and the Boston Red Sox in 1967, the year they won the American League pennant.

Guthrie concerned with traffic, starting position

By JANET GUTHRIE
For The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — I wouldn't be surprised to find myself running last after a couple of laps in the Indianapolis 500 Sunday.

I'm starting 26th. When you're starting nearer the front, you can afford to be a little more spirited, not all that concerned about the traffic around you. When you're starting at the back of the pack like this, there are limitless possibilities for foulups along the way. My policy is to avoid them and wait until the pack gets strung out.

Actually, it's going to be good starting behind my old friend Bill Vukovich, because that car of his should take off like a rocket at the start.

What's true of any other start in racing is intensified in this one — heavy traffic on a narrow track. It's pretty darn stupid to crash a car on the first lap of an endurance race. And I generally have been pretty conservative. There have been exceptions, but generally, I want to know exactly who's behind me and where he is. If it looks like a squirrel, he can go by and I'll fight with him later when I've got lots of room and only one car to worry about.

I think one of the biggest problems with the Indianapolis start is the mix of speeds resulting from the four-day qualifying. You don't get a lineup where the cars in front are faster. You get jumps all over.

I'd hate to guess what the pace might be in terms of miles an hour. I qualified at 188 m.p.h. Nobody is going to be able to run that all day.

One, your tires are going away. Two, you've got to think about your fuel consumption. Three, you've got to think about the effects on your car. And of course traffic is always a problem. If you give way to a leader or someone who's going to lap you, or if you have trouble passing a car that is marginally slower, all of that is going to have an effect on your average speed.

I have a friend up in Connecticut who's just a little bit psychic, and I was talking to her just the other morning and she said she had a dream. She said she wasn't really all that sure about its meaning, but she thought the symbolism might indicate I'd finish in the top three. She said, "Boy, wouldn't that be incredible?"

And I said, "Yeah, that'd be incredible."

Hogan Leader increases lead

Hogan Leader added to their big lead with 34 more points in the Wednesday Night Golf League at Washington Country Club.

In action last night, the Leaders beat the Blue Max, 34-18; the Tourneys beat the Top Flites, 31-21; and the Titleists whipped the Pro Staffs, 32-20.

Glen Helmick, Jr. of the Tourneys and Jim Polk of the Top Flites tied for medalist honors on the night. Each fired a 38 on the nine holes.

Top scorers last night were Doug Dye and Ernie Stanforth for the Pro Staffs and Everett Rudolph and Web Fleming of the Titleists each scored eight points last night.

Hogan Leader now has a big 16-point bulge over the second place Titleists. The Pro Staffs, nine points out of first place last week, slipped all the way to fourth.

MOM'S DAY HISTORY

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Mother's Day, first observed here in 1908, has origins going back to the ancient Greeks.

According to Hallmark researcher Sally Hopkins, a spring festival was held annually in Greece and Asia Minor honoring Cybele, goddess of nature and motherhood. This custom spread to Rome about 250 B.C. as the festival of Hilaria. The three-day period of dancing and feasting began on the Ides of March.

Nowadays, Mother's Day is celebrated not only in the United States but in Austria, Canada, Mexico, China, Japan, the West Indies, parts of Africa and in most South and Central American countries. To mark the occasion, Americans are expected to send more than 200 million Mother's Day cards this year.

Computer bartender exhibited

CHICAGO (AP) — It won't listen to your troubles or warble Irish ditties. But the computer bar can dispense one of 1,200 different drinks in less than three seconds, and it won't cheat the cash register.

The bar, demonstrated at the National Restaurant Show, splashes, mixes and pours ingredients in the precise amount to fill the glass. The drinks also are priced, taxed and recorded, and a complete customer guest check is printed, all in the same operation.

It can pour from one drop to 64 ounces. Liquids are drawn by a gravity-fed pump through separate lines, preventing any cross mixing, and lights warn when a bottle is running low.

The turn of a key controls price changes for special entertainment and happy hours. The names of various cocktails, glass size, and all types of liquors are on the drink buttons on the electronic keyboard.

Joe Shannon of Kent, Ohio, thought it up. He went from premedical and prelaw studies at John Carroll University in Cleveland into the juke box business. The juke were in 17 bars he eventually bought.

"Then I found I was losing 18 per cent of gross receipts," said Shannon, 37. "It wasn't spillage or overpouring that was cutting profits. It was thievery or giveaways by clever bartenders, bar managers and waitresses. So I thought up a computer bar that made all this impossible. Anyone working them has to be honest."

Former Armco president dies

MIDDLETOWN, Ohio — Logan T. Johnston, 77, president of the Armco Steel Corp. from 1960-1965 and board chairman until 1971, died at his home here Wednesday.

The internationally-known steel statesman launched the most comprehensive expansion program in Armco's history, and encouraged the company to initiate major pollution control techniques for industry.

Johnston was the recipient of the steel industry's two highest honors, the Gary Memorial Medal of the American Iron and Steel Institute and the International Award for Outstanding Achievement from the International Iron and Steel Institute (IISI), which he helped found.

During Johnston's five-year term as president of the Armco Steel Corp., the company experienced its most extensive growth and improvement. By its completion in 1972, Project 600, the most expensive construction campaign in Armco history, had produced the latest in construction techniques, equipment, materials and pollution-free operation. The project's innovation won for Armco the 1970 "Outstanding Engineering Achievement of the Year" award from the American Society of Civil Engineers.

With his retirement as Armco board chairman in 1971, Johnston ended a business career highlighted by honor and acclaim. In 1964, President Lyndon B. Johnson appointed him to the Public Advisory Committee on Trade Negotiations which resulted in a general agreement on tariffs and trade. In 1965, he was named to the U.S. Treasury Department's Industrial Payroll Savings Committee by Treasury Secretary Henry Fowler.

Johnston served as a director of the American Iron and Steel Institute, Cincinnati Milacron Co., Standard Oil of Indiana, Cincinnati Gas and Electric Co., Union Central Life Insurance Co., Superior Coach Corp., the Cincinnati branch of the Federal Reserve Board and the Cleveland Federal Reserve Bank board.

Survivors include a son, Logan T. Jr., Hinsdale, Ill., a brother, two grandchildren and four great-grandchildren. His wife, Janet, died in November 1976. A memorial service will be held at 2 p.m. Friday at the First Presbyterian Church in Middletown. Arrangements are under the direction of the Wilson-Schramm Memorial Home. The family suggests memorial contributions may be made to the Middletown Hospital auxiliary.

LOGAN T. JOHNSTON

Farming weather shows little change

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Here is the agriculture weather advisory for Ohio provided by the National Weather Service:
Dry conditions are expected to continue through the Memorial Day weekend.

Field Operations — Daily evaporative rates will continue at or above 0.20 inch. No significant rain showers activity is expected across the state. Ohio soils are now rather dry through the top 4 to 6 inches. While emerged and well established plants are not generally showing signs of moisture stress, new seedlings will find little available moisture for germination and subsequent emergence.

Forages — Conditions will remain good for cutting, drying and harvesting hay through the weekend. The regrowth of harvested fields will be slow due to the hot afternoon temperatures and the low soil moisture levels. Insect development is also accelerated and will be putting additional stress on the regrowth of forages. Regrowth of pastures will also be slow, so conservation through rotation of pastures may be required. Any overgrazing may not be controlled until cooler, wet weather returns.

Livestock — Temperatures through Friday will be a few degrees cooler. Highs are expected to be in the upper 70s north and in the low 80s central and south today and about five degrees warmer on Friday. Livestock will continue to need ample supplies of water and provision of shade or adequate ventilation will be essential. Saturday through Monday will become quite warm with some temperatures in the 90s possible.

Spraying — Wind speeds will be light to moderate tonight and Friday morning, providing good spraying conditions.

Corn crop nearly in COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio farmers apparently have not let the heavy rain of late April or the dry soils of May slow them in their planting.

The Ohio Crop Reporting Service said about 90 per cent of the intended corn crop has been planted and soybean planting has advanced to 65 per cent of the goal.

This is considerably ahead of normal for both crops, the reporting service said this week.

About 45 per cent of the intended planted corn acreage has emerged and generally looks good, the service said. Some of the soybeans are showing a need for moisture, the service added.

Planting of potatoes is on schedule with 85 per cent in the ground, the service said, and setting of tomato plants is continuing in the northwest, although some plants are suffering from heat stress and lack of rainfall.

The Agriculture Weather Center in West Lafayette, Ind., warns that this is a poor time to be setting any warm season vegetable plants. "Survival for plants set now is not likely unless irrigation can be provided," the center reported.

"Even back yard gardeners will have a difficult time in direct seeding warm season crops," the center said, suggesting that gardeners make one heavy watering for the gardens rather than repeated light wettings.

Fair, warm weather will continue across Ohio into the weekend.

A weak cool front moved southward over Ohio during the night, bringing slightly cooler and drier to the state. However, the front produced no sorely needed rainfall.

A high pressure ridge stretching from east of Canada's James Bay southward to Ohio was to push south and east today and Friday.

A northeasterly flow over the area today will give way to a more southerly flow tonight and Friday.

Highs today were to be from the mid 70s to the low 80s under sunny skies. Skies will again be clear tonight and lows will generally be in the 50s.

Friday will be a little warmer with increasing humidity as a result of the more southerly flow. Highs Friday will be in the low to mid 80s.

The outlook is for the fair, warm weather to continue through the Memorial Day weekend with still no worthwhile rainfall in sight.

Ohio extended outlook, Saturday through Monday: fair and warm through the Memorial Day weekend. Highs from mid 80s to low 90s and lows in the 60s.

Power site panel schedules meet

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Ohio Power Siting Commission will hold hearings at Berlin Heights and Huron on Aug. 22-23 for the proposed Erie Nuclear Plant.

The plant is to be located in Berlin Township in Erie County. The Ohio Edison Co., one of several firms that will jointly own the plant, has applied to the commission for a certificate of environmental compatibility and public need.
